

Interior Landscape

by TONG, JIOLIN

SUPER MARKDOWN

This book is composed of two parts: technical theories and some wonderful projects. The first part goes into finer details about the characteristics, design approaches and considerations Campus Landscape Planning & Design, including all the aspects. The book focuses on the design of interior gardens in commercial, office, and residential buildings. Various landscaping elements are discussed in detail, especially plant species selection. Atriums and vestibules are the most potential places for an indoor garden, and are key junctions for circulation. Landscaping in these areas is introduced in particular. The book includes general design principles and case studies of recent interior landscaping projects by world-renown designers.
